Decentraland is another Metaverse candidate that grapples with this very issue. Dave Carr of the Decentraland Foundation tells me that the founders decided that “rather than have these environments be controlled by central bodies, they should have a decentralised structure and be open to everyone to own and govern.” From economic matters, to content moderation and even the maintenance of its servers, Decentraland’s user base dictates its entire policy course through regular votes.

Roblox operates as a platform for game creation. It has existed for over 10 years now.

If these new spaces were indeed to emerge, it’s worth considering the issue of control and mediation of information. The internet as we know it today wasn’t developed by any one single entity, but built collaboratively around open standards and protocols, including, notably, net neutrality. Whether such principles would govern this would-be internet successor is a topic of debate. If any company were able to consolidate power over the Metaverse’s formation and become its de facto gatekeeper, the control they could wield over the dissemination of information and in setting their own commercial and security practices would be enormous.
